

Qubies – the must have item for all mum’s about to start their baby on solids.

September 3, 2009 by babyunivers Filed under Product Reviews

If you are a new mum or about to start your baby on solids – you definitely need to get a Qubies!

It is a fantastic product – I wish that I had one of these when I was making baby food and putting it into ice trays – I could have saved myself a lot of cleaning up!!

The Qubies is like an ice tray – only 100 times better! You get bigger cubes of food and you don’t have the mess that you have when trying to get food out of an ice tray.

The base of the Qubies has no compartments – it is just one long container – so instead of having to spoon separate bits of food into each little ice compartment, you can fill the whole base up. Once you have put your food into the base, pop the lid on (the lid is the clever part – it is what divides all the food), put it in the freezer and when it comes out frozen – your food is divided into 8 cubes of 30ml each. And best of all, when you take it out of the freezer, all you need to do is give the container a bit of a twist so that the food cubes are released. Take the lid off – and your frozen food is ready! No mess, no fuss. When using a normal ice tray, you have to bang the food out or try and use a knife to get the little cubes out – but with the Qubies, it really is so simple and easy.

And the Qubies would not only be useful for baby food, you can also use it to freeze fruit for the kids on those hot days, freeze breast milk, or even just for plain old ice – the ideas for its use are endless!

If you are going to use a Qubies for baby food, I would highly recommend getting more than one.

I would have one in the freezer, whilst the other is in the wash!

At only $17.95 – they really are a must-have item for all new mum’s.

For more information or to purchase Qubies, visit their website <http://www.qubies.com.au/>